NOTICE.

THIS collection of works of art needs no introduction to the public. Through the generosity of the owner the majority of them have been for years freely exhibited in this and other cities of the Union. Many of the productions have a fame as master pieces in the art centres of the world; and the whole collection has been accepted by the best judges as one of the finest, if not the finest, most varied, and complete collection ever brought together on this continent.

The writer of these lines having been a witness of the growth of the collection, can testify to the great care and liberality exercised by the collector.

The dispersion by auction of this collection of treasures will be an era in the art history of the country, and many regrets caused by this dispersion will be mitigated by the fact that a wide distribution of them will be an ultimate benefit to the cause of art.

The paintings have always been well cared for, and are in very excellent condition.

Mr. Johnston's entire collection will be offered intact; nothing has been added, nothing has been, or will be, withdrawn, but all will be submitted to public competition.

53 Spalatro's Vision of the Bloody Hand.

20 by 32.

3 4 00 -

(Painted at Cambridge, 1832.)

"Spalatro was employed by Schedoni to murder Eliena, the heroine of the story. The time fixed for this deed is in the night, while the victim is asleep; but on their way to her chamber the assassin's heart fails him, he refuses to do the deed; at that moment of compunction his former crimes crowd thick upon his memory, and a bloody hand seems to beckon him in the air."

"Give me the dagger," said Schedoni. Spalatro now grasped the arm of the confessor, who, looking at him for an explanation of this extraordinary action, was still more surprised to observe the paleness and horror of his countenance. His starting eyes seemed to follow some object along the passage. Schedoni looked forward to discover what occasioned this dismay, but could perceive nothing. "What is it you fear?" said he, at length. Spalatro's eyes were still moving in horror. "Do you see nothing!" said he, pointing. "Dotard! what did you?" inquired the confessor. "It came before my eyes in a moment, and shewed itself distinctly and outspread—and then it beckoned—yes, it beckoned me, with that blood-stained finger!" "This is very frenzy," said Schedoni. "Arouse yourself, and be a man!" "Frenzy! would it were, signior. I saw that dreadful hand—I see it now—it is there again!—there!”

Vide Mrs. Radcliffe's Romance, "The Italian,"
Chap. xx.

Extract from a Letter written by Mr. ELIAS N. BALL, of Charleston, S. C.—May 7th, 1866.

"The 'Spalatro' was painted for my uncle, H. S. Ball (who married Miss Channing, of Boston), under the following circumstances :

"My uncle was intimate with Allston, and visited his studio frequently. On one occasion he had been reading Mrs. Radcliffe's novel of 'The Italian.' and the scene from which the picture is taken struck him as being a fine one for an artist, and he read it to Allston, at the same time offering him any amount he might name for a painting of the scene. Allston being also pleased with the force of the scene, agreed to his offer and painted the picture. Before it was completed, he received several high offers for it, but, of course, declined them, as the painting was for my uncle, who, upon hearing of them, and the said offers being above the contract price, and knowing it would be useless to offer Allston more than he had engaged to paint it for (Allston being a man of the most punctillious honor and delicacy of feeling), he had the picture exhibited in Boston, New York and Charleston, and the amount of the proceeds of the exhibition (which, I believe, were considerable) was handed over to Allston by my uncle's agent in the matter.

"The painting was willed to my father by his brother, H. S. Ball (who was lost, together with his wife, in the ill-fated steamer 'Pulaski'). It has never been out of my family, and was never sold but once, and that was at the settlement of my father's estate, when I purchased it." 854 $ 3,000.00

In a letter to a friend, Allston said: "Since my return to America I have painted a number of pictures, but chiefly small ones. These pictures being pretty well known here, I shall mention only a few of the larger ones, viz.: 'Jeremiah dictating his prophecy'—the figures as large as life; 'Saul and the Witch of Endor,' and 'Spalatro's vision of the bloody hand.' This last is a small picture, but I mention it because it is more extensively known, and because, too, I consider it one of my best."

THE ORIGINAL SERIES. The subject is comprised in Four Pictures. The first represents the period of Childhood; the second, Youth; the third, Manhood; the fourth, Old Age.

Bought by H. B. Plant -

1. CHILDHOOD.—A stream is seen issuing from a deep cavern in the side of a craggy and precipitous mountain, whose summit is hidden in clouds. From out the cave glides a boat, whose golden prow and sides are sculptured into figures of the Hours. Steered by an Angelic Form, and laden with buds and flowers, it bears a laughing Infant, the Voyager, whose varied course the artist has attempted to delineate.

On either hand, the banks of the stream are clothed in luxuriant herbage and flowers. The rising sun bathes the mountains and flowery banks with rosy light.

The dark cavern is emblematic of our earthly origin and the mysterious Past.

The Boat, composed of figures of the Hours, images the thought that we are borne on the hours down the Stream of Life. The Boat identifies the subject in each picture. The rosy light of the morning, the luxuriant flowers and plants are emblems of the joyousness of early life. The close banks and the limited scope of the scene, indicate the narrow experience of Childhood and the nature of its pleasures and desires. The Egyptian Lotus in the foreground of the picture, is symbolical of human Life. Joyousness and wonder are the characteristic emotions of childhood.

2. YOUTH.—The stream now pursues its course through a landscape of wider scope and more diversified beauty. Trees of rich growth overshadow its banks, and verdant hills form the base of lofty mountains.

The Infant of the former scene is become a Youth on the verge of Manhood. He is now alone in the Boat, and takes the helm himself, and in an attitude of confidence and eager expectation, gazes on a cloudy pile of Architecture, an air-built Castle that rises dome above dome, in the far-off blue sky. The Guardian Spirit stands upon the bank of the stream, and, with serious, yet benignant countenance, seems to be bidding the impetuous voyager God speed.

The beautiful stream flows for a distance, directly toward the aerial palace, but at length makes a sudden turn, and is seen in glimpses between the trees, until it at last descends, with rapid current, into a rocky ravine, where the Voyager will be found in the next picture. Over the remote hills, which seem to intercept the stream, and turn it from its hitherto direct course, a path is dimly seen, tending directly toward that cloudy Fabric, which is the object and desire of the Voyager.

The scenery of the picture—its clear stream, its lofty trees, its towering mountains, its unbounded distance, and transparent atmosphere—figure forth the romantic beauty of youthful imaginings, when the mind elevates the Mean and Common into the Magnificent, before experience teaches what is the Real. The gorgeous cloud-built palace, whose glorious domes seem yet but half revealed to the eye, growing more and more lofty as we gaze, is emblematic of the day-dreams of youth, its aspirations after glory and fame; and the dimly-seen path would intimate that Youth, in its impetuous career, is forgetful that it is embarked on the Stream of Life, and that its current sweeps along with resistless force, and increases in swiftness as it descends toward the great ocean of Eternity.

3. MANHOOD.—Storm and cloud enshroud a rugged and dreary landscape. Bare, impending precipices rise in the lurid light. The swollen stream rushes furiously down a dark ravine, whirling and foaming in its wild career, and speeding toward the Ocean, which is dimly seen through the mist and falling rain.

The boat is there, plunging amid the turbulent waters. The Voyager is now a man of middle age; the helm of the boat is gone, and he looks imploringly toward heaven, as if heaven's aid alone could save him from the perils that surround him. The Guardian Spirit calmly sits in the clouds, watching, with an air of solicitude, the affrighted Voyager: Demon forms are hovering in the air.

Trouble is characteristic of the period of Manhood. In childhood, there is no carking; in youth, no despairing thought. It is only when experience has taught us the realities of the world, that we lift from our eyes the golden veil of early life; that we feel deep and abiding sorrow: and in the Picture, the gloomy, eclipse-like tone, the conflicting elements, the trees riven by tempest, are the allegory; and the Ocean, dimly seen, figures the end of life, which the Voyager is now approaching. The demon forms are Suicide, Intemperance and Murder, which are the temptations that beset men in their direst trouble. The upward and imploring look of the Voyager shows his dependence on a Superior Power; and THAT faith.

4. OLD AGE.—Portentous clouds are brooding over a vast and midnight Ocean. A few barren rocks are seen through the gloom—the last shores of the world. These form the mouth of the river, and the Boat, shattered by storms, its figures of the Hours broken and drooping, is seen gliding over the deep waters. Directed by the Guardian Spirit, who thus far has accompanied him unseen, the Voyager, now an old man, looks upward to an opening in the clouds, from whence a glorious light bursts forth, and angels are seen descending the cloudy steps, as if to welcome him to the Haven of Immortal Life.

The stream of life has now reached the Ocean to which all life is tending. The world to Old Age is destitute of interest.

There is no longer any green thing upon it. The drooping figure of the Boat shows that time is nearly ended.

The chains of corporeal existence are falling away, and already the mind has glimpses of Immortal Life. The angelic Being, of whose presence, until now, the Voyager has been unconscious, is revealed to him; and, with a countenance beaming with joy, shows to his wondering gaze scenes such as the eye of mortal man has never beheld.

Bryant, in his Oration, calls the Voyage of Life "of simpler and less elaborate design than the Course of Empire, but more purely imaginative. The conception of the series is a perfect poem. The child under the care of its guardian angel, in a boat heaped with buds and flowers, floating down a stream which issues from the shadowy cavern of the past, and flows between banks bright with flowers and the beams of the rising sun; the youth, with hope in his gesture and aspect, taking command of the helm, while his winged guardian watches him anxiously from the shore; the mature man, hurried onward by the perilous rapids and eddies of the river; the aged navigator, who has reached, in his frail and now idle bark, the mouth of the stream, and is just entering the great ocean which lies before him in mysterious shadow; set before us the different stages of human life under images of which every beholder admits the beauty and deep significance. The second of this series, with the rich luxuriance of its foreground, its pleasant declivities in the distance, and its gorgeous but shadowy structures in the piled clouds, is one of the most popular of Cole's compositions."

TURNER (J. M. W.), R. A., dec'd, London.

76 The Slave Ship.

36 by 48.

10,000 -

Purchased direct from John Ruskin.

Extract from "Ruskin's Modern Painters."

"I think the noblest sea that TURNER has ever painted, and if so, the noblest certainly ever painted by man, is that of the Slave Ship, the chief Academy picture of the Exhibition of 1840. It is a sunset on the Atlantic, after prolonged storm; but the storm is partially lulled, and the torn and streaming rain-clouds are moving in scarlet lines to lose themselves in the hollow of the night. The whole surface of sea included in the picture is divided into two ridges of enormous swell, not high, nor local, but a low, broad heaving of the whole ocean, like the lifting of its bosom by deep-drawn breath after the torture of the storm. Between these two ridges the fire of the sunset falls along the trough of the sea, dyeing it with an awful but glorious light—the intense and lurid splendor which burns like gold, and bathes like blood. Along this fiery path and valley, the tossing waves by which the swell of the sea is restlessly divided, lift themselves in dark, indefinite, fantastic forms, each casting a faint and ghastly shadow behind it along the illumined foam. They do not rise everywhere, but three or four together in wild groups, fitfully and furiously, as the under-strength of the swell compels or permits them. leaving between them treacherous spaces of level and whirling water, now lighted with green and lamp-like fire, now flashing back the gold of the declining sun, now fearfully dyed from above with the undistinguishable images of the burning clouds, which fall upon them in flakes of crimson and scarlet, and give to the reckless waves the added motion of their own fiery flying. Purple and blue, the lurid shadows of the hollow breakers, are cast upon the mist of the night, which gathers cold and low, advancing like the shadow of death upon the guilty ship as it labors amidst the lightning of the sea, its thin masts written upon the sky in lines of blood, girded with condemnation in that fearful hue which signs the sky with horror and mixes its flaming flood with the sunlight, and, cast far along the desolate beave of the sepulchral waves, incarnadines the multitudinous sea.

now in Boston Museum of Art

"She is a Slaver, throwing her slaves overboard. The near sea is incumbered with corpses.

"I believe if I were reduced to rest Turner's immortality upon any single work, I should choose this. Its daring conception, ideal in the highest sense of the word, is based on the purest truth, and wrought out with the concentrated knowledge of a life; its color is absolutely perfect, not one false or morbid hue in any part or line, and so modulated that every square inch of canvas is a perfect composition; its drawing as accurate as fearless; the ship buoyant, bending and full of motion; its tones as true as they are wonderful; and the whole picture dedicated to the most sublime of subjects and impressions (completing thus the perfect system of all truth, which we have shown to be formed by Turner's works)—the power, majesty and deathfulness of the open, deep, illimitable sea."

Extract from Mr. Ruskin's Letter to Mr. Johnston.

PISA, 28th April, 1872.

"I am entirely busy and very weary just now, and can only tell you of the picture that it is almost unique in perfect preservation as having come to me direct from Turner's gallery, and never exposed to damp or hot sun. * * * That I think as highly of it, as a work of art, as I ever did. I part with the picture because as I grow old, I grow sad, and cannot endure anything near me, either melancholy or violently passionate. As an expression of, perhaps the strongest, true indignation against the slave-trade (not, observe, against slavery)—ever felt by wise persons in England, this picture ought to be where it now is, in the chief city of North America. I wish I had as good a second, by as good a painter, against Liberty-trade.

"For its quality, not entering into any question of its agreeableness to the taste of various persons, I can answer to you very positively: There is such a thing as good painting, and it may be known from bad by any person who will take pains and has natural powers of sight. And Turner's is the best work that has been done in Europe since Sir Joshua Reynolds.

"There is no 'mania' for his pictures. The public are beginning to accept the fact of their value; and there are few in the market.

"When two rich people want the same picture, it may then reach almost any level at auction: and with whatever fault or short-coming, your picture is such a one as no price is likely to command again for many a day."

" Then in a silken scarf—sweet with the dews
Of precious flowers pluck'd in Araby,
And divine liquids come with odorous ooze
Through the cold serpent pipe refreshfully—
She wrapp'd it up; and for its tomb did choose
A garden-pot, wherein she laid it by,
And cover'd it with mould, and o'er it set
Sweet Basil, which her tears kept ever wet.

" And she forgot the stars, the moon, the sun,
And she forgot the blue above the trees,
And she forgot the dells where waters run,
And she forgot the chilly autumn breeze;
She had no knowledge when the day was done,
And the new moon she saw not; but in peace
Hung over her sweet Basil evermore,
And moisten'd it with tears unto the core."

The favorite niece of Sir Joshua. She married Robert Gwatkin, of Cornwall. As a girl she sat for many of Sir Joshua's fancy subjects, for example, the "Strawberry Girl," "Girl reading Clarissa," "Girl with a Muff," "Hope nursing Love," the "Comedy" in the Garrick picture, &c., &c.

This picture was purchased at the sale of the artist's effects after his death, by Dr. Thos. Penrose, a great friend of Sir Joshua, and a distinguished connoisseur. It was presented by Dr. Penrose, in June, 1840, to the late Mr. Lucas, an artist, and sold by his executors at Christies, London, 1875. The picture is mentioned in the artist's diary, has been engraved in mezzo tint by S. W. Reynolds, and etched by Rajon, 1875.
